Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Mason Core: Social/Behavioral Sciences

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 120: Globalization and Society. 3 credits.

Examines and analyzes important global issues and processes. Considers historical development of globalization and implications for different societies and cultures. Investigates perceptions of global processes by different cultures and nations, and efforts of international institutions to address social, political, economic, and cultural changes in global society. Notes: Students may not receive credit for both SOCI 120 and GLOA 101. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Mason Core: Global Understanding

Schedule Type: Lecture

300 Level Courses

SOCI 300: Social Control and Freedom. 3 credits.

Explores ways in which individuals are both architects and prisoners of society. Offers a foundational course for examining the "invisible" social forces that shape our lives and the individual and collective capacity to make choices, including social and cultural change. Includes topics such as youth and culture, deviance and crime, social inequalities, and global change. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 301: Criminology. 3 credits.

Focuses on causes and meaning of crime, with emphasis on adults. Patterns of criminal behavior, including property crimes, violent crimes, organized crime, white-collar crime, and victimless crime. Critical assessment of criminal justice system as a response to crime. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 302: Sociology of Delinquency. 3 credits.

Examines social factors involved in development of delinquency, including family, political economy, schooling, community environment and culture. Examines various theories of delinquency; rates of delinquency in relation to age, race, gender and social class; and legal system that addresses causes, consequences, and policies of punishment and rehabilitation. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 303: Methods and Logic of Inquiry. 3 credits.

Actively engages students in original inquiry meaningful to themselves and their communities. Demonstrates the reciprocal relationship between theory and empirical research. Explores the complementarity of interpretive and explanatory logics, employing basic sociological methods. Guides students to formulate research problems; design research; gather and analyze evidence; and organize, frame, and revise arguments, culminating in a public presentation of their projects to the sociology faculty. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Recommended Prerequisite: SOCI 101, SOCI 102, or permission of instructor.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 304: The Future of Work. 3 credits.

Introduces the basic concepts of economic sociology. Explores how the world of work has changed due to globalization, deindustrialization, new technologies, and economic crisis. Focuses on providing students with a better understanding of how markets and corporations work, and about new economic approaches to create new, potentially less alienating work environments. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 307: Social Movements and Political Protest. 3 credits.

Explores processes for organizing resistance to current social and power arrangements, from terrorism to nonviolent civil resistance to create alternative institutions, policies, or leadership that promote human rights and social justice. Uses historical and contemporary case studies of local and global change to explore, how, why, and to what effect individuals have organized to protest the status quo and create social change. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 308: Race and Ethnicity in a Changing World. 3 credits.

Explores how race and ethnicity have been shaped by policies and practices in Western and non-Western societies. Explores the evolution of racial and ethnic attitudes from a global and historical perspective. Examines how changing demographic racial patterns may affect definitions of race and ethnicity and the ways in which people individually and collectively act to create new futures. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 309: Marriage, Families, and Intimate Life. 3 credits.

Uses a sociological framework to analyze and understand the diverse forms of contemporary families—traditional marriages, cohabitation, domestic partnerships, single-parents families, stepfamilies, and gay and lesbian families. Explored are topics such as changes in sexual mores, reflected in new dating practices; shifting parenting roles; effects of social class, race and ethnicity; and the outcomes of divorce for couples and children. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 310: Sociology of Deviance. 3 credits.

Analyzes macro- and microlevel deviance-producing processes, meaning and control of deviance, and major theoretical approaches to deviance. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 311: Classical Sociological Theory. 3 credits.

Explores sociological tradition through readings and discussions of ideas drawn from writings of selected sociological thinkers such as Comte, Marx, Weber, Durkheim, and others. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Recommended Prerequisite: 6 credits of upper level (300 or 400 level) sociology courses, or permission of instructor.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 312: Qualitative Research Methods. 3 credits.

Introduces ethnography, field work methods, interviewing, life histories, and other qualitative methods to generate data about cultures in which various groups and classes are immersed. Students learn by applying qualitative methods to term projects, developed under guidance of instructor. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Recommended Prerequisite: 9 credits of Sociology including SOCI 101 or SOCI 102 or permission of instructor.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 313: Statistics for the Behavioral Sciences. 4 credits.

Fundamentals of applied statistics as used in behavioral science to include descriptive statistics, inferential statistics, correlation regression, analysis of variance, factor analysis, nonparametric statistics, and practical experience with calculators in applying statistical analysis to actual problems of the behavioral sciences. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Mason Core: Quantitative Reasoning

Recommended Prerequisite: SOCI 101 or permission of instructor.

Schedule Type: Laboratory, Lecture

SOCI 314: Sociology of Culture. 3 credits.

Examines how culture, encompassing high art or participatory culture, expressive agency or traditional constraint, is produced and reproduced in everyday social practices and across a wide range of social institutions. Explores the role of culture in public life and political discourse. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 315: Contemporary Gender Relations. 3 credits.

Examines the meaning and significance of gender relations in the US and other societies around the globe. Examines the concepts and processes of privilege, power, and difference to understand how they shape the meaning and construction of feminine and masculine roles and identities and why gender difference (which conceptually does not imply inequality) translates into gender inequality. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit. Equivalent to WMST 301.

Schedule Type: Lecture

SOCI 320: Social Structure and Globalization. 3 credits.

While focusing on nature and process of change in human society, considers social impact of political, economic, and environmental change and how lives are shaped by complexities of global social forces. Examines specific global issues such as conflict and security; economic disparity; ecological deterioration; populations and migration; legitimization of commerce; diffusion of innovations; and impact of class, status, and power in modern societies. Offered by Sociology & Anthropology. May not be repeated for credit.
